Probably. Do you think by “permanently” deleting these messages that will flag someone to look at them? I’ve always heard someone can look at our messages at any time.

Maybe these were 1995. You, me, Hillman, Ed DeCosta and others at Ed’s house. I think it was a party for when I went to felonies, maybe 1995.

The Moriarty encounter goes like this: Mark went down to the courtroom the morning of closing arguments knowing there would be a lot of cameras and media people there, including Erin (Moriarty). I can call her Erin because we spent a lot of time together and she was here for almost all of the trial. Anyway, Mark apparently asked Heather, his “PIO,” to introduce him to her. I’m sure Mark thought she’d be happy to meet him and would treat him as the significant authority figure and celebrity he thinks he is. However, she immediately told him she was “disappointed” that he went on the Nancy Grace show while our trial was ongoing. Mark then told her that’s the best time to talk publicly about the case because it’s when the public is most interested in the case. Erin then got very mad and they went to the hallway, out of the courtroom where the contact began, so she didn’t make a scene. Once outside, she got in his face and said “do you even know what the issue with speaking publicly during a trial is?” She said it was unethical to speak as he did and that his conduct could very well have compromised the defendant’s right to a fair trial and that at a minimum there is that appearance. She told him very strongly that we (all of the attorneys) had worked very hard for weeks and had put on many witnesses who came a long distance (from other states) to testify, and had witnesses testify via Skype from Afghanistan and Germany. She told him much of the testimony had been very difficult for the witnesses. She told him the victim's family had flown out and had been staying in a hotel for weeks while observing the trial, and that they did not have much money to do so. She told him the defendant's family also came from out of State to watch the trial and also had spent a lot of money to be here. She said because of his selfish need for publicity, all of this effort and expense could have been for nothing, and that the case in theory could have been dismissed.

Mark then got mad and said he disagreed with her and walked off and told Heather to come with him. He then told Heather that we would not be talking to Erin or the 48 Hours show people anymore because they were defense oriented and the show was not any good. He also called Jared into his office and scolded him for not telling him the Nancy Grace show was trash. Much later, about three days into the jury's deliberations (they were out for 7 days), one of the producers wanted to interview me in my office. Mark, however, asked me to come to his office before talking to her and tried to tell me the show was not a good show and was defense oriented. I told him I disagreed and told him I watch the show and like it and that I believe they fairly represent the cases, in a dramatic manner. I then did the interview.

I actually like Erin and her producers. I took one of them, an older guy, to Fircrest for dinner and he was fascinating. Anyway, it's not going to end around here.

So I made about the hardest decision of my life when I left, but I had to reclaim myself. I know being in his administration makes you completely irrelevant. My only function was to carry out directions and decisions I generally disagreed with. Prior to him "promoting" me, I loved my job and was very proud of all that I had accomplished in 20 years. I enjoyed my reputation (which he has systematically tried to damage ever since I left-most DPAs in that office won't look at me or speak to me). But I had to refuse to do some things he wanted me to do.

The way to stay and protect yourself, and enjoy keeping your job and reputation, is to speak out. The whistle blower law was created exactly to protect employees who complain about or report wrong doing by their employer. People who know he has done things wrong (certain people in the civil and criminal divisions) should seek whistle blower protection and report what is really going on. There has never been a better time to do it. I can't believe people can cover for him and live with themselves.

I can't wait to hear about the Moriarty encounter.

I agree, but there has to be a way to get the truth out there and not suffer consequences and to be able to support someone else and not suffer consequences. I just haven't come up with the way yet. How can someone with four children and many bills, who in general likes his job and all that he's accomplished in twenty one years, give it all up and try to find another job that will equate. It's just not out there for a 56 year old homely man! I tried to help out from within (meaning as an Assistant Chief Criminal Deputy), but the reality is I was never involved in anything of any significance. Mark, Dawn, John and certain civil attorneys, depending on the issue, made all the decisions. Lindquist and Dawn control every aspect of this office and the meetings where my input was given was just perfunctory – they had either already made decisions or would make them after the meeting, on every issue I was involved in. When Mark spun the Nancy Grace thing in the newspaper, I had had enough and told them I wanted to get out of management and go back to gangs and human trafficking. They were happy to let me go and probably were going to move me anyway because my statement to the court that only Mark can say why he spoke to her and Jarod and I had nothing to do with it, hit him hard.

I have to go but remind me to tell you what happened when he encountered Erin Moriarty, the person in front of the camera on the 48 hours show. She ripped him a new one! I have to go get Joe to boy scouts. See ya!

Brett Hyer, I think. And Erika Nohavec is the new District Court Chief. I told them I wanted out last week and they were happy to let me leave. Angelica, the new head of SAU is trying to make John Cummings the new Human Trafficking DPA in SAU but I just had a meeting and told her it wasn't going to happen and I would take the cases back and let our unit do them. I told her Cummings is a Lindquist political puppet and I don't care for him. In any event, we'll see what will happen. I got Neeb back over here in my unit and that will be interesting also. I am trying to just do my work as best I can and get to retirement in 8 or 9 years. I'm not sure I'll make it. If Mark ever looks at my e-mails, I'm gone!

I'll let the person who decided he needed to go on that show handle that one. Did you hear Kit is the new Chief Criminal Deputy, John Sheeran is the Assistant Chief Criminal Deputy, Tim Lewis is the Felony Division Chief, and Michelle Hyer is the head of the Appeals Unit. What a great future we have in store!

I just learned the jury hung on murder 1 and murder 2. I'll find out the split soon.

Plus 60, so 162, I hope, which is 15 years. We did not offer man. 1. Stewart offered it and we said no but his client would have never taken it. We offered murder 2 and the defense could ask for low end. I'll bet most of the jurors were leaning toward murder 2, which is why they were out so long. I'm telling you, it was a very difficult case. Stewart's biggest victory was in convincing the judge to give a man. 2 instruction, which I was worried a juror or two would water the verdict down to. I don't like the verdict but considering the lack of motive, Jarod and I both believed it would come back man. 1.

That's the verdict I was predicting but believe he shot her intentionally. There's just not enough motive evidence. He's looking at about 16 or 17 years, I think.
